Then you might add a slice of Pioneer Bacon or Ham. And then a cup of Banquet Blend Coffee. A pretty good Breakfast for one of these cool mornings.

The 1916 Campaign Draws to Successful Close

The forces for California Dry enter the last fortnight of the campaign with good reason for their confidence for a successful outcome.

Their forces are united. Their supporters are registered. They have an exceptional organization for getting the voters to the polls.

In the long campaign they have beaten the pro-liquor element at every point.

The stock argument that "prohibition hurts business" has been disproved by the experience of every important community in Washington, Oregon, Arizona and Colorado.

The charge that prohibition does not prohibit has been met by every competent observer of conditions in neighboring prohibition States.

Business men have testified that prohibition helps business; labor leaders have shown that it helps labor. Extravagant claims of the number who would be thrown out of employment by prohibition have been ridiculed out of court until pro-boozers organizations now disclaim responsibility for them.

Even the shield of the grape vine has been denied the saloons and their allies. The California public now sees the hypocrisy in the "save-the-vineyard" makes it, and from incontrovertible facts and figures concludes that in the end the dependable branches of California viticulture will be benefited instead of injured by banishment of the liquor traffic.

And the saloons and their allies recognize all this. They are in a panic. Evidence of their panic is seen on every billboard and in every newspaper they can induce to print their advertisements. They are attempting to dam the flood of opposition to them with dollars.

Their publicity campaign is costing them many thousands of dollars. Every page advertisement which they print in the San Francisco daily papers, for example, costs them $560 for each paper each day.

Every informed person knows that the statements made in their advertising are untrue. But they are evidently proceeding on the theory that a lie often repeated may be believed. Their course is an insult to the intelligence of The People of California.

California is now looking upon the saloons and their allies beaten. The one-time blustering liquor forces are seen quibbling and wimpering; quarreling among themselves; holding one another responsible for their stupid blundering; their campaign of falsehoods and misrepresentation punctured; their agents and representatives discredited.

T. M. Wright Asks Re-election

It was good news to the residents of Campbell and vicinity to learn that the name of our Assemblyman, T. M. Wright, would appear upon the ballot at the coming election as a candidate for re-election to the office. It indicates the general esteem in which he is held that while he is a Republican, he was given the nomination by all other parties—Progressive, Democratic, Prohibition and Socialist.

It is imperative that the people of this district return Mr. Wright to the Assembly, for he has proven himself a legislator of influence and ability. He was made chairman of the committee on Public Morals, and was a hard working member of five other committees at the last session, which has given him splendid training for the work in the next session.

His record as a citizen and business man is an open book. He has lived in this county forty years, and for the past 25 years has been the head of one of the largest printing establishments in San Jose. He served as trustee of the town of East San Jose during its entire existence, and was chairman of its board. While in this office he helped to close the saloons of the town, install the library, sewer and lighting systems, and accomplish other desirable things.

In the Assembly he supported the measures proposed by Governor Johnson, known as administration measures, and also used his vote and influence in behalf of the various measures proposed by the Women's Legislative Council. On humanitarian measures he has been referred to as "an ideal legislator," and Governor Johnson has recently referred to Mr. Wright as a man who "represented the highest type of citizenship and legislator."

The question to be determined by the voters of this district on November 7th is, Shall a man with such a record as citizen and legislator, with his frank and open espousal of all practical measures and movements that make for morality, progress and humanity, be returned to the legislature, where he can continue his able representation of the district and his effective work for the people of California?

BIRDS FRIGHTENED BY WAR

Those of Belgium Have Largely Disappeared From Their Accustomed Nesting Places.

Where are the birds of Belgium? Everyone who has known the Belgium of the past will ask himself this question in thinking of some of the admirable Flemish restaurants he has visited. For the Belgians were a nation of bird eaters, and in this little country as in Italy every variety of bird was pressed into service.

No one who has been through the forests of the Ardennes will fail to recall how strangely silent they were, how lacking in bird songs, for the wholesale slaughter of the birds went on until one wondered where the little song birds appearing on their pieces of fried bread came from. Now with the noise of battle over all the land, the constant cannonading has frightened away even the boldest of the native birds.

Grives were the aristocrats of Belgian game birds, and one of the most delectable dishes known to the Belgian cuisine was grives a la Namuroise. Thousands of grives were served daily in autumn in restaurants, and as no Belgian dinner is considered complete without a bird of some sort, just where so many came from always remained a mystery. A grive is a thrush, but blackbirds and starlings, so nearly of the same size, often masqueraded in the Belgian casseroles as thrushes.

Then beside grives there were woodcock and snipe and the because a la Champagne to be had in restaurants in Brussels and Antwerp was a delicious morsel indeed. At Mons and at Liege and Charleroi every year there was a great fete called a woodcock feast, at which the succulent birds were cooked in a variety of ways. A little wax candle was placed beside the plate of each diner, and in its flame he would frizzle the tiny head of the woodcock and eat its brains, which were considered a great delicacy.

The partridges of Louvain were famous for their plumpness and delicious flavor, perhaps because of the fact that they fed upon the beet root cultivated there by the hundreds of acres for the great beet sugar factories. Blackcock is served too as coq de bruyere.

Woodcock in season used to be the specialty of the Faillie Dechree, a famous little restaurant in Brussels. "Gangas du Japon," often served in the finer restaurants in Brussels, was simply Japanese partridge. These birds often migrated to northern Africa in winter and made their way thence to Spain, where they were caught in large numbers and finally taken to Belgium, where they were bred. They had flesh of fine flavor and plumpness.

FIND GOODNESS IN PLEASURE

People Are Beginning to Understand That It Is a Mistake to Work Too Hard.

For a good many years we had a creed that the only way to keep men or women good was to work them to death. We didn't consider ourselves virtuous unless we ended each day so toll-wearied that we had no ambition for anything but bed. When we had a holiday we didn't know how to use it, and either slept it away or did something that landed us in jail.

The doctors are telling us now that there is a fatigue poison; that we owe it to ourselves not to overwork. The great labor unions are demanding shorter hours and graded work, so that men and women workers shall not be overtaxed, and so that the few may not be overworked and underpaid at the expense of the many.

We are learning very, very gradually, that man was not created to labor 18 hours out of the 24 in order that he may have the privilege of eating and sleeping. Very, very gradually we are being taught that we are part of God's pasture, and that, rich in sunshine and fresh air and an opportunity to enjoy them.

Measure of leisure in each day is necessary to cultivate sweetness of soul, and the boy or girl, so overworked, has no opportunity to reach the high. Indeed, too much work is as much a breed of idleness.

Desperate effort is not the answer. More often the man who is too tired to look for excitement.

Purgatory Chasm

WHERE THE WALLS ARE 80 FEET HIGH

EVER been in Purgatory?

Many persons have declared their expectation of going there eventually, but there are thousands who have already made the trip, have enjoyed the experience and have come away wondering why more people do not go there.

The Purgatory in question is located in the town of Sutton, Mass., and those who have visited the spot are convinced that the commonwealth has missed an opportunity to become famous for having within its confines one of the strangest and most interesting freaks of nature in the world.

Purgatory, in Sutton, is a chasm. Its admirers declare that it is more attractive and remarkable even than the Flume in the White mountains, and they are back of a movement to have the commonwealth acquire the property and make a reservation out of it for the benefit of the whole people.

Purgatory chasm has for years been a source of wonder to geologists, for they cannot agree as to what caused it. A large number of them seem to think that at some time, eons ago, a portion of the earth at this point dropped down out of sight, leaving a great chasm whose base is filled with giant boulders and deep caves.

Until a few years ago this chasm, situated in the midst of a forest of pine, hemlock and spruce, was a favorite outing spot for people in Worcester and surrounding towns, but as the roads to it were not kept in good condition the visitors decreased until now it has practically been forgotten except by a few enthusiasts.

Explored by Commission.

Led by Arthur E. Seagrave of Uxbridge, who is assistant attorney general of the commonwealth, they have been endeavoring for several years to have the legislature take an interest in the matter of preserving the natural wonder, and finally succeeded this year in securing an appropriation of $100 to be used for an investigation of the matter by the state forestry commission. This commission, which is composed of the state forester, Frank W. Rane, Harold Parker and Harvey N. Shepard, with Charles O. Bailey as secretary, has completed its investigation. Not one of them had ever seen Purgatory chasm before.

"I was amazed," said Mr. Bailey when he returned to Boston. "It actually awed me, it was so majestic, so wonderful. In some ways it resembles the Lost River chasm in Vermont, and to my mind is more interesting than the Flume in New Hampshire. After going nearly a mile through the woods you suddenly come upon this freak. There are stones weighing 50 tons at least that have been hurled about. Some of them stick out at least 15 feet from the sides of the chasm, 40 feet or more in the air. There are caves where ice remains much of the summer, and at the end of the chasm is a wonderful cave, on the floor of which is an immense slab of stone that looks just like a giant's coffin. It is called the Devil's Cave.

"The vegetation there is remarkable. Great trees grow apparently from the solid rock, their roots often going up 10 to 15 feet over the boulder, then turn down over it to reach the soil. If a balloonist should start from the Rocky mountains and land at this spot, he would think it was a part of the Rockies. Speaking as a private citizen, I believe it would be a great shame to let a few dollars stand in the way of preserving this great natural wonder for the people of Massachusetts."

Some Great Caverns.

"Hell's Coal Bin" is one of the largest caverns in Purgatory, not far from the northern entrance. It would hold 25 persons easily. The "Devil's Ice Box" is another great cavern, its ceiling lined with icicles until the middle of June. "Pulpit Rock" is a wedge-shaped piece 40 feet high, from which many a sermon has been preached by the unordained.

For all its ruggedness, the trip through Purgatory chasm may be made by women, although it is not a place for silk hosiery and thin-soled pumps.

Some of the rocks in the chasm are as large as a bungalow, and the mass of boulders extends far into the earth. It is possible for one to go down into great crevices until well out of sight below the surface, and in other places rocks may be dropped into other holes, and they rattle from boulder to boulder until the sound of their downward progress is lost in the depths.

In spite of the ravages of forest fires in this section, the virgin wood surrounding the chasm for more than a mile has not been harmed.

Paying the Price

We are always paying the price for the things we lose or gain. Out of this life of the mingled gift of gladness and of pain; And whether we pay for pleasure or whether we pay for sin, It is always paying the price for life, no matter where we begin.

We say we have had a lot, we've enjoyed and we've shared in the best; We sit sometimes with a little dream of old content in the breast; And then when we look away and think of the things that were nice, It all comes over us, lucky or sad, that we've had to pay the price.

The magnate pays for his, as the pauper pays it, too; And the saint pays just as the sinner does and the unsaved have to do; In all that we have and hold, or in all that we've thrown away; It is sure in the end to come to this that there was a price to pay.

We pay it for love and peace, for cheer and comfort and song; We pay for sinning and 'going astray, we pay it for doing wrong; In all that we are or seem, in gladness or grief or pain, We are always paying the price for the things that we lose or gain. —Folger McKinsey, in the Baltimore Sun.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

A college education is not a scheme to enable a man or woman to live without work. Its purpose is to help them to work to advantage, to make every stroke count. —David Starr Jordan.

What Shall I Feed My Family?

Tapioea is one of our good foods, which may be used in place of the more expensive gelatine in many dishes. A few trials will prove its worth.

The Wholesome Onion.

The wholesome onion should make a welcome dish for at least one meal during the week, and those who serve them oftener will find they tend to keep the body in a healthful condition.

Oatmeal Cakes.

Use a cupful of cooked oatmeal. Into this beat four eggs, the yolks and whites beaten separately, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and a dash of pepper and salt. Roll in cracker crumbs and fry in butter. Serve with bacon or ham.

Angel Custards.

Heat a quart of milk in a double boiler, and when hot pour it slowly on the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs; sweeten the custard with two scant tablespoonfuls of pulverized sugar, flavoring with a few drops of almond extract and turn into small custard cups; set the cups in a pan of hot water and cook in a moderate oven until firm. Cover with grated macaroni crumbs or browned nuts.

Frozen Rice Pudding.

Boil in slightly salted milk a cupful of washed rice until tender, then stir the whole into a pint and a half of boiled custard. Allow the custard to become cold, then fold in a half pint of thick cream beaten stiff. Turn into a freezer, freezing to the consistency of soft snow, then add a cupful of chopped preserved ginger and two tablespoonfuls of the sirup. Freeze until firm and smooth and serve in sherbet glasses, garnished with ginger and whipped cream.

Prune Tapioca.

Cut into quarters prunes that have been stewed with sugar and a little lemon peel. When cold, pour over the fruit the following: Soak a cupful of tapioca in a pint of water for two hours, then cover with rich milk and cook until tender, stirring in after removing from the fire, two well-beaten egg yolks and two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a grating of nutmeg. Cover all with a meringue made from the whites of the eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and serve cold with a sauce made from the prune sirup.

Language of Windmills.

In Holland births, marriages and deaths, instead of being recorded in the newspapers, are indicated by windmills. When the miller gets married, he stops his mill with the arms of the wheel in a slanting position, and with the sails unfurled. His friends and guests frequently do likewise with their mills, in token of the ceremony. To indicate a birth, the wheel is stopped in a slanting position, but at a more acute angle than that of a marriage, and with the two upper sails unfurled. Should a miller die, the sails of the mill are all unfurled, and the wheel is turned around until the arms form an upright cross, in which position they are left until after the funeral takes place.

Lightning's Toll in Year.

During one year—1899—the United States weather bureau kept a record of lightning and it was found that during that year strokes of lightning caused damages as follows: 6,256 buildings struck, property to the value of $3,016,520 destroyed, 563 persons killed, 820 persons injured, 4,251 head of live stock struck in fields, causing a loss of $129,955. In 1902 a fire insurance paper kept track of fires caused by lightning and estimated the property lost thereby at $3,396,000, the latest statistics.

ROUMANIA and its People

ROYAL PALACE AT BUCHAREST

A VIVID picture of the Roumanian peasantry, whose country has been drawn into the destructive vortex of the European war, is presented in a communication to the National Geographic society from James Howard Gore. He says:

A Roumanian village looks its best in the spring, when nature, awakened from the sleep of winter, is green and fresh. At Easter the cottages have been whitewashed and the doors and window frames freshly painted in bright colors. The thatched roof has been put in order, and in its entirety the cottage calls to mind the black-eyed country girls, with their glistening strings of multi-colored beads around their necks.

The Roumanian peasant women one meets by the roadside are the fairest among the Balkan peoples, and this natural gift is most apparent under conditions which are calculated to enhance it. Their dress is varied and elaborate. The foundation is a sort of shift reaching to the ankle, the upper part embroidered with colored cotton, usually red or black. Over this is a petticoat which, in its material and detail, reflects the taste and buying power of the wearer. On her head the peasant woman wears a scarf of cotton tissue with silk stripes if her means permit, and on gala occasions she puts on a brighter kerchief, ornamented with a fringe or a row of spangles. Both men and women seem partial to having their heads covered, even in the house; but it is not regarded proper to eat without removing the hat.

In no part of Europe do the peasants hold so tenaciously to their distinctive costume as in the uplands of Roumania. It is, in fact, almost an asset in nationalism, and its unifying influence was emphasized some years ago by the late dowager queen, widely known as Carmen Sylva, when she herself put on the native dress.

What They Grow and Eat.

While wheat is the great staple of this agricultural country, the soil is equally adapted to corn (maize), and would be called upon for greater crops if the demand should justify it. The ease with which corn can be converted into substantial food tempts the people to give but little attention to the form in which it is prepared for consumption. Polenta, a sort of mush, can be made of cornmeal and water, and if time or energy be lacking, it will be placed on the table insufficiently cooked. Although many believe that this is the cause of the greater part of the pellagra so common in Roumania, it is difficult to persuade the peasant to exercise greater care in the preparation of polenta or substitute for it some of the many palatable dishes that can be made from corn.

Cooking, unfortunately, is not developed as it should be, and the people seem to be content with simple fare and a sameness that yields but little to the seasons. Gardening is looked upon as petty farming and not worthy of the attention of a man who calls himself a farmer; in fact, so few Roumanians have gardens that they are called "bulgarii," since the greater part of the vegetables grown are in the hands of immigrant Bulgarians. The soil and climate of the country are adapted to as wide a range as can be found in our middle Atlantic states, however.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:

Frankfort, Ky.—“I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish.”—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice.—It will be confidential.

Admiral Von Tirpitz.

Admiral von Tirpitz, at the head of the German navy, and whose name has figured prominently in the news of the day since the sinking of the Lusitania, started Germany on the path of navalism in 1898. He has little use for society and has never regarded social graces as “desirable attributes of men who expect to fight the Kaiser's battles on sea.” His rise has been rapid. At twenty he was a lieutenant, and twenty years after entering the navy he was flying the pennant of a rear admiral. He first attracted the attention of the Kaiser by reorganizing, or rather by creating, the German torpedo fleet. He was also instrumental in establishing the German outpost of Kiaochow, a colony that has been directly under his jurisdiction as minister of marine.

Prominent Russian Statesmen.

General Sukhomlinoff, minister of war for Russia, unlike most of his predecessors, is a Slav and a Russian Nationalist, and was formerly military governor of Kiev. His work, until summoned to assume the task of reorganizing the military forces of Russia as minister of war, was entirely within the strategic problems of Russia's western frontiers. He took part neither in the Chinese nor Japanese wars, nor in any of the Asiatic wars, under the celebrated General Dragomiroff, whose favorite lieutenant he was, and whom he succeeded in the command of the southwestern frontier. By profession he is a cavalryman, and is generally regarded as the most remarkable cavalry leader in Europe.

BIG SIX ONE OF BIG FIVE AMONG BASEBALL VETERANS

Christy Mathewson Takes Place in Hall of Fame Beside Wagner, Lajoie, Walsh and “Cy” Young.

They might be called the big veteran five of baseball, Christy Mathewson, who has become the Red manager, after 16 seasons of pitching duty with the Giants; John Henry Wagner, the famous Dutchman, who still plays shortstop wonderfully well for the Pirates, although he is forty-two years old; Napoleon Lajoie, of the Athletics, the once peerless second baseman, who is rounding out his twentieth year in the major leagues; Ed Walsh, the renowned White Sox twirler, whose star is fading in his fourteenth season in fast company, and Denton Tecumseh Young (Old Cy), who pitched 20 years in the big circuits.

Future generations of fans will read of their exploits in baseball history, but it is doubtful if they ever will see the equals of these pillars of the national pastime. Did you ever read or hear of a scandal involving these players? Did they ever indulge in disorderly conduct on or off the ball field? No, and they took good care to save some of the large salaries which the magnates gladly paid to them.

Matty is more dearly beloved of New Yorkers than the other members of the big five. He has been the idol of fans there since he began to show his remarkable pitching skill as a Giant in 1901. He won 20 games that year and 13 in 1902, but after that he did not score fewer than 22 victories in any campaign up to 1915. It was in 1908 that Big Six won 37 games, his best performance, while in 1904 he pitched 33 victories. Matty took part in four world's series—in 1905, 1911, 1912 and 1913. His magnificent pitching in the 1905 series enabled the Giants to win three of their games with the Athletics. In other words, Matty practically beat the Mackmen that year single handed.

The inventor of the fadeaway won 24 games and lost 13 in 1914 without the slightest indication of losing his remarkable skill.

War Makes New Economies.

War is producing some queer economies. The Italians, who are fighting above the snowline find wood scarce and fires a rarity. Their difficulties have aroused the scouts to action. They visit every house, collect the waste paper, and then hand it over to the girls collected in a central station. These girls, working under the eye of a teacher, spread the sheets flat and feed them into a machine which rolls them tightly into a roll of about an inch in diameter. But they are too long for use, so a chopping machine worked by hand produces as a final result, little tight rolls about two inches long. These can be dropped into a knapsack, and when a fire is wanted three or four are taken out, placed on the ground, lit, and enough heat is generated to warm thoroughly a mugful of soup.—London Chronicle.

Cardboard Replaces Wood.

Because of their many advantages over wooden boxes in the shipment of small articles, corrugated cardboard boxes are rapidly replacing the former. Although the cardboard boxes are strong enough to withstand heavy pressures, they weigh considerably less than a wooden one of the same size, hence they effect an appreciable saving in express or freight charges. Furthermore, the cardboard boxes, because they can be folded flat and stored in that shape until used, occupy little space. As a typical example, it is reported that 3,000 cardboard boxes have been stored in a space which formerly accommodated but 200 wooden boxes of the same capacity.—Scientific American.

Africa Still Leads.

South Africa leads the world. During 1911 the value of the precious stones exported from the union was $41,409,535; in 1912, $45,765,580, and in 1913, $60,082,625. The first diamond was discovered in South Africa by a trader named O'Reilly, who obtained a stone weighing 21½ carats from a Dutchman who was utterly ignorant of its value. The stone was later purchased by Sir Philip Wodehouse for $2,500.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't waste a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tonic tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.—Adv.

Wide Awake.

An abnormally fat man lumbered into a Pullman on a west-bound train, and set up a loud protest when he found that his berth was at the end of the car.

“I can't sleep a wink if I'm over the car wheels. I won't close my eyes if you put me over the car wheels, porter.”

“Can't help it, sah,” said the porter. It's the one that was sold you, and it's the only one there is. You'll have to take a chair car and set up if you don't take this.”

The fat man finally decided to keep the berth, protesting to the last that he did not expect to close his eyes. Shortly his snoring were heard above the rumble of the train, but it was not until the train had a long wait that the sounds issuing from the berth caused anything but amusement. In the silence, however, they got on the passengers' nerves, and by request the porter prodded him in the ribs.

“My goodness, sah!” demanded the porter. “If you makes noises like that when you're lyin' wide awake over the car wheels, what would you do if you was sound asleep in the middle of the car?”

Old-Time Grain Reappears.

A grain called “guanti” or “huanti” is mentioned in old Mexican chronicles as among the articles of tribute paid by the Mexican pueblos to Montezuma. The identity of this grain has long been a mystery. In recent years wild and cultivated varieties of a grain, apparently the ancient guanti, have been found in Sinaloa and other states of Mexico, where the natives use it for food when maize is scarce. Species that are similar if not quite the same are cultivated for food in Peru and Bolivia as well as in Tibet and the mountainous regions of India.

TIRED OUT.

There's many a housewife who sits on the porch in the growing shadows of a summer evening, knowing to the full what it is to feel tired out; as if there was not another ounce of effort left in her. But she knows how sound her slumber will be and how refreshed the morning will find her. That's the tiredness of a healthy woman. But it's another thing for the sick woman to feel tired out. Rest only seems to increase her suffering. Just as in profound silence a discord jars the ear more forcibly, so now that she has stopped moving about, this tired woman feels more acutely the aching back and throbbing nerves.

Sick women, thousands of them right here in California, have been made well by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, heals inflammation and ulceration.

Los Angeles, Cal.—“After being seriously ill for some time, with no relief from any doctor or their medicines, in desperation I tried Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and was soon restored to health and happiness. I also recommend the ‘Lotion Tablets’ to all women suffering with diseases peculiar to their sex. Long live Dr. Pierce and his never-failing remedies.”—Mrs. THERR, South Grand Ave.

FOR PUBLIC SAFETY

NATION HAS BEEN AWAKENED TO GREAT NEED.

Prevention of Industrial Accidents and Casualties in Conflagrations is the Object of Association of National Scope.

Is the bitterness of a dozen years ago passing out of industry? Are employers becoming more humane? Is the public conscience awakening to the sin of omission as well as commission? Is the human element receiving recognition as the most precious asset of our nation?

“Our state pays the salaries of more than a hundred game and fish wardens to protect the beasts of the fields and the fowls of the air and the fishes of our streams. What does it contribute toward the protection of the workers in the industries?” asked a labor organizer in a public meeting.

Ask the question today and the answer will come from the national government at Washington, from every state capital, from almost every city hall, from every church and school, and, probably the truest barometer of all, from thousands of our largest employers, and from the best-posted industrial leaders.

Nor does the movement stop with the industrial accident. Twin cause of sorrow and misery of industrial accident, fire takes toll in mine explosion and conflagration, but more often in the home. In Chicago last year 300 persons were seriously injured by burns or scalds. One-half of this number died, a majority of whom were little children. An association of national scope has taken this matter in hand and is accomplishing wonderful results.

Railroads and accidents were almost synonymous terms a dozen years ago. Last year the managers of 312 railroads reported to the government that not one passenger lost his life through collision or wreck. Industrial corporations reported a reduction from 37 to 70 per cent in number of accidents and an even larger percentage in reduction of fatal accidents.

Last year a dozen governors of middle western states made proclamation of Fire Prevention day—usually setting the date on October 9—the anniversary of the date of the famous O'Leary bovine incident at Chicago. Accident Prevention day was proclaimed in a hundred cities and in a thousand industries. This year two great agencies, the National Fire Protection association and the National Safety council, have joined forces, and Fire Prevention day will hereafter be known as Fire and Accident Prevention day, being inaugurated by national proclamation by President Wilson.

More than a score of governors have indicated their intention of joining in the movement through proclamations. Hundreds of chambers of commerce will take part and two thousand industries will set aside some portion of their activity toward making the day a success.

The spirit of co-operation in accident and fire prevention now pervades every department of public and private activity. The national government, through the department of labor and the bureau of mines, is accomplishing a splendid work, and the hundreds of thousands of dollars expended in educational work is probably the best known and appreciated of all our governmental functions. Every state in the Union has made a start, and in a score or more the work is well under way. A hundred or more municipalities have well-developed departments of public safety, while street traffic regulations, clean-up campaigns and similar public responsibilities are now cheerfully accepted by even the smaller cities and villages.

The spirit of the up-to-date employer was summarized by a hard-headed Wisconsin business man a few days ago: “If the organization of our workmen into safety inspection committees had not prevented a single accident, the change in attitude which the safety work has brought about on the part of the officers toward the men, and the change of attitude of the workmen toward the company has more than repaid us for our efforts.” By carefully safeguarding machinery, accidents were decreased one-third.

“Who burps to death in the American home?” asks H. W. Forster, a prominent official of the National Fire Protection Association. “The husbands, fathers and big brothers? Not often. The wives and mothers and the children, especially the little children. In hundreds of homes all over our fair land each year there comes the crushing sorrow of a dead mother or child, burned to death, in almost every case, because of the criminal disregard which we as a nation have for the most elemental principles of safety from fire. Each year we lose through this agency almost 1,000 of our most precious assets—our children.”

“Fire causes 5,000 deaths, renders 20,000 people homeless, and causes a loss estimated at almost $300,000,000 a year. Industrial accidents take toll of 25,000 lives each year and cause 700,000 injuries, involving a loss of a month or more time from work.” Two-thirds of all fires and a like number of industrial accidents are preventable.

“One day for humanity” is the motto of Fire and Accident Prevention.

Fluctuation in Currant Trade.

Holland's tulip craze recalls the rush which developed in Greece something like thirty-five years ago, when landowners staked their all on the future of currants. After the vineyards of France had been ravaged by phylloxera, there sprang up a great demand from that country for Greek currants to be used in wine-making, and prices soared to heights never before known in the currant trade. Under this stimulus Greek landowners all through the currant-producing provinces uprooted their olive groves and planted the lands to currants, until within a few years the acreage had far more than doubled. Then France, having found means to combat the phylloxera, placed upon currants a prohibitive import duty, thereby permanently shutting off from Greek currant growers the market whose demands had stimulated them to increased production. Immediate supply overtopped demand in the world's currant market—this district, which supplies the world's currants, was producing 30 per cent more fruit than it could dispose of. Prices fell precipitately, and for decades the currant trade was in a bad condition.

Gums and Health.

Two drops of camphor on your toothbrush will give your mouth the freshest, cleanest feeling imaginable, will make your gums rosy and absolutely prevent anything like cold sores or affections of the tongue. The gums, by the way, are barometers of your condition. If they are clear, bright red, you are in good health, while if your blood is thin and wanting in the mysterious red corpuscles that make one healthy, the gums will be pale pink, or if you are in a very bad way, indeed, and much in need of a course of dialyzed iron, they will be almost white.—Leonard Keene Hirschberg.

Shadow Pictures for Children.

For shadow pictures hang a sheet in a double doorway, if possible. Have a lamp, or preferably a bull's-eye lantern, set about two feet from the floor at the back of the room used as a stage. All kinds of interesting and amusing shadow pictures may be given with the help of stiff paper cut-outs, which may be pinned to hair and costume to change the outlines. Large paper noses, pointed chins and beards may even be fastened to the features with a bit of paste. Indians with paper feathers and cardboard tomahawks, and Puritan maids and men with paper caps and broad-brimmed hats, can give appropriate historic scenes.—Modern Priscilla.

Smith-Harlan

Another of Campbell teachers joined the matrimony Sunday when Miss Mary Estlin became the bride of George A. Harlan.

The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. W. H. Lloyd, occurred at six o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Lucy P. Smith of Campbell Avenue.

The rooms were beautiful with jars of chrysanthemums and roses, while the bride party stood in an embrasure banked with bamboo, under a bell made of smilax and double marguerites, with rose clapper.

The bride, who was attended by Miss Lulu Harlan, sister of the groom, was very becomingly gowned in white silk, combined with Georgette crepe and lace and carried white carnations.

Miss Harlan wore blue brocaded silk and carried pink carnations. Mr. Albert Jorgenson acted as groomsmen, and Miss Anna Hagelin played the Lohengrin wedding march.

Ice cream and cake were served and shortly after the bride and groom left for San Francisco where they spent a couple of days. Tuesday they started for their home, going via Monterey and down the coast.

Mrs. Harlan, mother of the groom, was the only other guest, beside the bride's family and the attendants.

Mrs. Harlan has spent many years in Campbell, graduating from the local high school and San Jose Normal. Since graduation she has taught very successfully at Lucia, where her husband is engaged in stockraising. He has erected a home for his bride and they enter upon their new life with the best wishes of many friends.

Mission Hatchery

The "West Side" of Campbell has the "growing pains", and things are happening out that way. Rincon Avenue seems to be the storm center-the new grammar school is progressing rapidly, while across the county road, the Mission Hatchery buildings are nearing completion, and will be ready for the new season's business which opens in December.

Three homes have been started lately along the Avenue, making a record of five for the year, and another is planned for in the near future. Mr. Ellison says there are only a few of the acres left on the market, and from the present rate of inquiry, expects to see it all built upon this winter.

Aside from the fine location, and character of the soil, the opportunity to carry on a very profitable poultry business here, is open to the buyer, as the Mission Hatchery contracts to buy the output of eggs at a high premium over city prices, meaning a good market for the product, together with the advantages of co-operation in buying of feed and supplies. The old Rothschild maxim, "Buy cheap, sell dear", being one of the roads to success in the poultry business, but hard work and common sense have to be mixed with it.

The Mission Hatchery will be one of the largest hatching plants in the state, with a capacity of over 100 incubators holding 540 eggs each. What this means in the way of eggs in the busy season goes beyond the average "lunch counter" consumption, as it takes nearly 60,000 eggs to fill them all, for one hatch, which is the chief reason for the upbuilding of the poultry business near home-35,000 chicks every three weeks is "some chicken", and most of them are some travellers too, as the greater part go to Utah and adjoining states.

"THE Peninsular railway will not go back on the county bridge at Campbell unless the Campbell people want it there," said Supervisor Roll, to a Press representative Wednesday and he feels quite certain that the people don't want it there. A petition is now being circulated among the residents of Campbell community asking the Board of Supervisors to permit no railroad to lay track over the bridge on Campbell avenue.

As to the spur track into the creek bed, Mr. Roll stated that on two occasions a Peninsular Railway representative asked him when he wanted the spur track laid. Mr. Roll told him that he didn't want it at all as he thought this would place the county under an obligation to the railway company which might embarrass the County later. Thus we may see the wisdom of his act.

Congregational Church Notes

Sunday morning Nov. 5th Dr. L. D. Rathbone, Home Missionary Superintendent for Northern California, will speak. Dr. Rathbone is not a stranger to Campbell people and we are sure a large congregation will greet him Sunday morning. The offering for the Home Missionary Society will be taken at this service.

The Sunday Evening service will be a Union Mass meeting to be held in the Methodist church. It has been arranged that the sermon shall be given by the Congregational pastor, the Rev. W. E. Eckles.

Mr. J. E. Woodruff and wife lately from Oregon are staying at the Campbell Apartments while building their new home in the Mission Hatchery Tract on Rincon avenue.
